Red Sox finally earn the right to Bragg

■ Darren Bragg takes it upon himself to end Boston's four-game losing streak by drilling an RBI single and making a key defense play for a 2-0 victory over the Devil Rays.

Journal Sports Writer

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — It would seem impossible for the Red Sox to be playing a must-win game in July, particularly when the opponent is a last-place expansion team.

But having been swept in Baltimore four straight to start the second half of the season, there was an air of desperation to the Red Sox as they opened a brief two-game set here with the Tampa Bay Devil Rays last night.

"When you've lost four in a row," said Darren Bragg, "you don't want it to snowball."

Almost singlehandedly, Bragg made sure that it didn't. His fifth-inning RBI single gave the Red Sox a run that would stand up, and his strike to the plate in sixth to gun down Wade Boggs preserved the lead, sending the Sox to a 2-0 victory, their first since before the All-Star break.

When Troy O'Leary squeezed Kevin Stocker's fly ball for the final out, you could almost hear the Sox breathe a collective sigh of relief over the constant din of Tropicana Field.

"We all knew that we can't allow ourselves to lose four in a row and continue to be successful," said closer Tom Gordon, who recorded the final five outs for his 26th save. "We're a better team than that."

The Sox were better than the first-year Devil Rays last night, but only barely. The defeat was the 11th straight for the first-year Devil Rays, tying the longest losing streak in the majors this season.

Five of those 11 losses have been by shutout. It was the Red Sox' seventh shutout — combined or otherwise — which ranks them second in the league to the Yankees. The Devil Rays have scored just 16 runs in their last 11 games.

The Sox pounded out 10 hits, but half of those came in the final two innings. For the first seven innings, one run had to stand up. It came in the fifth, after two were out. Mike Bogaerts slapped a line drive to left-center and had his sights set on second from the moment he left the batter's box.

Bragg followed by slapping a single to right, scoring Benjamin.

Only when O'Leary's line single to left scored Nomar Garciaparra did the Sox have a little more than a one-run margin.

"It's never easy to break off a slide," said Mike Vaughn, who served as co-chairman with Bret Saberhagen of a pre-game meeting. "The first one you get is always a close game, always tight."

The key at-bat for the Red Sox may have come in the sixth.

The Devil Rays had already had a cally against a hard blue sky as they broke into groups at the jumping pits set up on the infield. Mel Carasone, the New York state indoor and outdoor champion this past season, was part of a cluster of boys assigned to Strawderman.

"I love it because you can get your entire body over a bar 16 feet in the air," said Carasone, a rising senior at Guildersland High who went 4.60 meters (15 feet, 1 inch) to win the New York indoor title, and 4.57 meters to cop the state outdoor crown. His personal best is 4.74 meters (15-6 1/2). "I'm shooting for 16-8."

"I went to this camp last year, and I like it right away. I improved a foot and a half in just four days," added Carasone, who earned high school All-American honors last month by finishing fifth at the National Scholastic Championships with a vault of 4.67 meters (15-4).

"Every time you go higher, it's a rush of excitement. Your expectations are always changing."

One thing that has changed is the recent addition of girls to the event. There were approximately 30 girls signed up for this camp session.

"They've certainly helped the pole vault," said Falk, who has run this camp — and a companion throws camp — for 22 years. "They're very good students of the event."

SOUTH KINGSTOWN — They are track and field's high fliers, lifting themselves skyward while riding the end of an arching fiberglass pole. Then it's release the pole and clear the bar. In world-class terms, that height can reach 19 or 20 feet, good for membership in the fabled "6-meter club."

They are pole vaulters, technicians in speed, strength, nimble reflexes and with a predilection for high places.

Since last Saturday, approximately 100 young vaulters have gathered on the infield of the URI track under the aegis of the Bill Falk Pole Vault School.

And while there may be no 6-meter practitioners among these students, one of the coaches — two-time All-American Bill Deering — went 19 feet in a practice jump.

"The kids were awestruck," said coach Mark Strawderman, a former URI All-American and an 18-foot-plus vaulter in his time.

The five-day camp is conducted by Falk, a longtime high school and collegiate track coach, and the acknowledged guru of pole vaulting.

Yesterday, students bore their poles verticaly against a hard blue sky as they broke into groups at the jumping pits set up on the infield. Mel Carasone, the New York state indoor and outdoor champion this past season, was part of a cluster of boys assigned to Strawderman.

Capone leads with a 68 in R.I. Amateur

By PAUL KENYON
Journal Sports Writer

NARRAGANSETT — Mike Capone had both the best score and the most impressive hole yesterday on the first day of the 93rd R.I. Golf Association Amateur Championship at Point Judith Country Club.

Capone, boosted by a spectacular eagle on the 575-yard 18th hole, recorded a 3-under 68 to take firm possession of the first-day lead. The 1996 champion was the only player in the 112-man field to break par over the 6,000-yard, par-71 layout.

Joey Iacofano of Metacomb, the defending champion, was the closest to Capone, surviving a balky pair of pants — which he eventually ripped — on the way to a 71.

Family matters first; then it's off to Merion

GLOUCESTER — It was at Merion in 1980 that Bobby Jones completed his legendary Grand Slam, adding the U.S. Amateur championship to the U.S. Open, British Open, and British Amateur titles he'd won earlier that year.

It was at Merion in 1950 that Ben Hogan, nearly killed in a car crash the year before, won a dramatic playoff for the U.S. Open championship. It will be at Merion next month that Lauren and Mary Ellen Grzebień of Saunderson, Narragansett High, and the Point Judith Country Club will be competing in the U.S. Golf Association Girls' Junior Championship for the second year in a row.

"I think it will be a lot of fun. I want to make it into match play again," said Lauren, who shot rounds of 77 and 79 last year at the Legends Club in Franklin, Tenn.

One of 64 qualifiers for match play, Lauren lost in the first round, 4 and 2, to Kelli Kimimura of Burlington, Wash., who went on to reach the quarterfinals.

"Last year built up my confidence," Lauren said. "I know that, if I play well, I can make it into match play. And, if I do better qualifying, I might draw an easier opponent in the first round."

"I'm excited," said Mary Ellen, who had rounds of 89 and 83 last year as a 13-year-old. "It helps me to play against older girls. It's good for me to try to keep up with them."

Sox lose their edge, fall to Tampa

■ Boston limps home after enduring its fifth loss in six games since the All-Star break; a 5-4 decision to the expansion Devil Rays.

By SEAN McADAM
Journal Sports Writer

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Red Sox fans looking for the proverbial silver lining can take comfort in the fact that their team is coming home, following a hellacious stretch in which they played 18 of the last 26 games on the road.

But their stay at home will be brief and demanding — a two-game stopover at Fenway with the defending American League champion Cleveland Indians.

Then it's back on the road for an even more challenging portion of the schedule. While in the last few weeks the Sox played just one team (Philadelphia) with a winning record, Boston will be tested with 17 of its next 23 away from Fenway, all but six of them against teams with winning records.

The team's least successful road trip of the season came to a merciful end yesterday with a dispiriting loss to the woeful Tampa Bay Devil Rays, who snapped an 11-game skid here with a 5-4 triumph over the Sox.

It was Boston's fifth loss in the last six games, all but one of which has been a one-run decision. Miguel Cairo greeted Carlos Reyes with a sharp single through the box with one out in the ninth inning, scoring Bobby Smith from third.

"I threw the wrong pitch," said Reyes. "I didn't hit my spot with my fastball. He beat me — that's all I can say."

The real culprit in yesterday's setback, however, was the offense, which again stalled. On the six-game trip, the Sox managed just 18 runs. Only once did they score more than four, and on that occasion, the pitching staff was shelled for 11 runs.

For the trip, the Sox hit just .226 as a team. "We've got to try to do a little better job from the offensive side," said Mo Vaughn. "I hope our pitchers don't get frustrated with us. This is not how we wanted to start the second half — no doubt about it."

The Red Sox appeared headed for their second straight win here, a victory to send them home with a modicum of satisfaction.

They've got their games on course

At British, the wind will direct your path

This is another in a series of first-person accounts of Barrington native Brad Faxon on life in pro golf, as told to Journal columnist Bill Parnillo.

SOUTHPORT, England — If you want to find out about yourself and your golf game, then maybe this is the place to be.

I'm talking about Royal Birkdale, a historic links course along the northwest coast of England where the wind always blows, the rough is up to your knees and your patience is tested every time you swing the club.

This is where they're going to be holding the British Open, which gets underway tomorrow. By then I will have had three practice rounds, but I'm still not sure if that's enough to really know what I'm doing.

I'll give you an example. I played a practice round on Monday, the day I arrived. My plane landed, I went straight to my hotel, changed clothes and then went out to the course, which is about five miles away.

I spied Bob Tway, Justin Leonard and Lee Janzen sitting around a table in the clubhouse, about to have a bite to eat. I joined them. They had just finished playing their practice round and all they talked about was the wind and how far their ball was rolling and I'm saying "Yeah, sure... yeah, sure."

Well, I went out later in the day, and they weren't lying.

At Royal Birkdale, they have two holes — the second and third — that run parallel to each other, the same distance. They're both par-4s, 420 yards — one into the wind and one straight downwind.

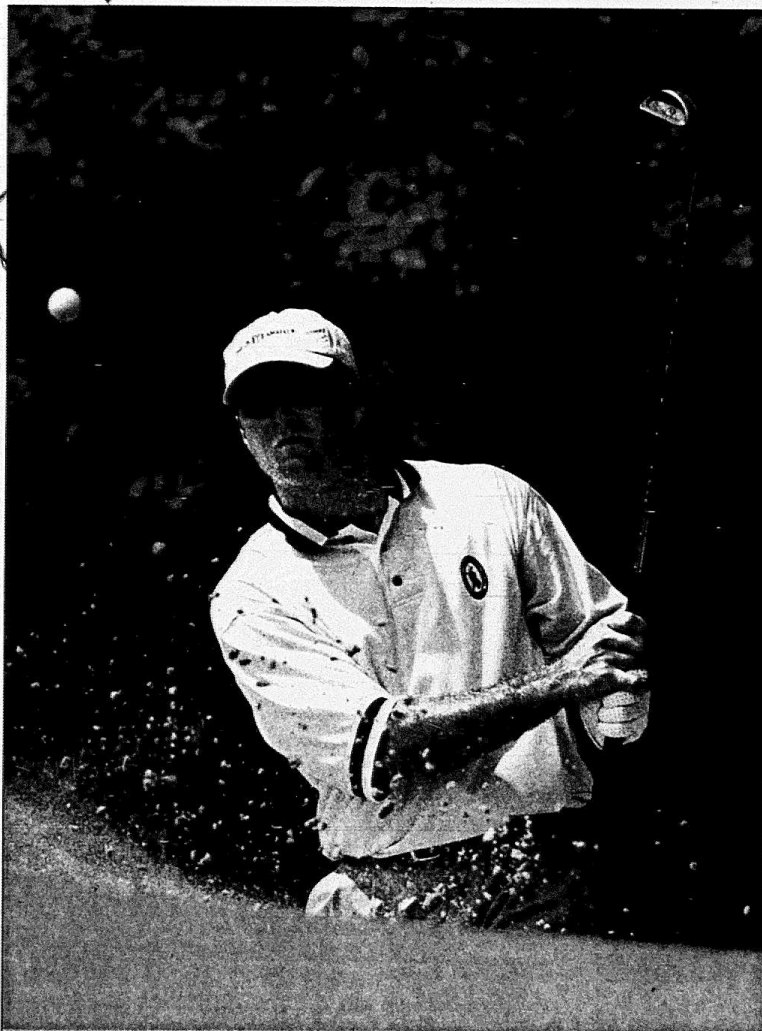

The second hole was into the wind. I killed a drive and then hit a 2-iron that barely reached the green. The third hole had the wind to your back. I hit a 2-iron off the tee and followed with a sand wedge into the green.

Hunter is all right after his wrong turn

NARRAGANSETT — No excuses.

That was drilled into Walter Hunter during his four years at West Point.

If something went wrong, if a mistake was made, there were no extenuating circumstances considered, no possibility of a misunderstanding, no allowance for bad luck. There would be, there could be, no excuses.

So what could Hunter say yesterday when, after sinking a 10-foot putt for birdie on the par-4 sixth hole at Point Judith to go 1-under, he walked to the wrong tee and proceeded to hit his driver, incurring a 2-stroke penalty?

Hunter pounded his ball far down the seventh fairway. The problem was, he did it from the 10th tee.

"It wasn't a smart move," he said. "If I practiced labor law like that, I'd starve."

You can make a case for Hunter, who is a partner at the Providence law firm of Edwards & Angell.

It wasn't as dumb a move as you might think.

The first set of tees that catches your eye as you come off the back of the sixth green are the blue markers that, for the second round of the State Amateur yesterday, were at the rear of the 10th tee.

But it easily could seem like the seventh, requiring only a slight draw to hit the fairway. Particularly since four other teeing areas to the left of the sixth green were starkly empty, while the markers for the seventh tee were partially obscured by several evergreens.

Hunter's playing partners, John Davis of Sakonnet and John Pellegrino of Triggs, were right there on the 10th tee with him. Had it been their honor, either would have teed it up and let fly.

Joe Sprague, the executive director of the R.I. Golf Association, was standing near the ninth green, checking the pace of play of the

P-Bruins will name Laviolette coach today

By BOB DICK
Journal Sports Writer

PROVIDENCE — Age and experience didn't get the job done behind the bench last year, so now the Providence Bruins will try a youthful approach in an effort to turn the club's on-ice fortunes around.

The Journal has learned that the P-Bruins will lower the age level of their new head coach by 30 years when they introduce one-time Providence defenseman Peter Laviolette as their new bench boss during a press conference today at the Civic Center.

Laviolette, 31, will replace 63-year-old veteran

Tom McVie, who was fired last Thursday after the P-Bruins had won only 19 games this past season and finished last in the American Hockey League.

Laviolette is no stranger to the Providence hockey club. He played parts of four seasons for the P-Bruins (1992-93 and 1994-97), and was an assistant coach for a year (1996-97) when Bob Francis was the head coach (1995-97). Francis now is an assistant with the Boston Bruins.

Laviolette, whose only NHL experience as a player was 12 games with the New York Rangers in the 1988-89 season, coached last year at Wheeling, W. Va., in the rough-and-tumble East Coast

Hockey League. The independent Nailers reached the semifinals of the ECHA playoffs.

To some observers, that was considered a major accomplishment by Laviolette, because he reportedly had 17 players who had only marginal professional hockey skills. Without an NHL affiliate, Laviolette took other teams' castoffs and molded a competitive club that played hard and won.

Without confirming Laviolette as his new head coach, Ed Anderson, Providence chairman and CEO, did say the new P-Bruins coach headed a list of six or seven viable candidates.

Constant using retirement to start another career

Thousands of people have gone into retirement the same way Tad Constant did last year. Few, though, have changed their lifestyles as drastically as Constant has.

Constant has gone from teacher and coach at Central Falls High to professional golfer. Now, his new career is about to take him away from Providence's Triggs Memorial, where he has played hundreds of rounds over the last two decades. In the swanky Riviera Country Club in Pacific Palisades, Calif. Instead of playing with guys named Yogi or Jiggsy at Triggs, Constant will tee it up with Arnie, Jack and Hale at Riviera.

Tad's Wonderful Adventure in Retirement takes him to the Tommy Armour Open next week. As a contestant.

Constant, 51, earned a spot in the national championship for players 50 and older when he qualified two weeks ago at Woodland C.C. in Newton, Mass. Seventy-three players took part. Only two moved on. Constant tied for second, with a 72. Mike McCormick, his buddy and frequent competitor from Triggs, and Forde Pitts of Massachusetts. Constant won the playoff on the third hole.

Constant never thought retirement could get this good.

"I didn't sleep all night I qualified. I was too excited," he said.

"To me, this is the chance of a lifetime. I guess I should say I won't be in awe when I go there. I know if I play well I can compete with those guys. I'm not really in awe of the way they play."

Still, he says he might do things a bit differently.

"I don't know if I should do it, but I might ask Arnie (Palmer) or Jack (Nicklaus) or Gary (Player) for their autographs. Gary Player was always one of my heroes. I'd love to get his autograph."

So, how does a guy go from teaching and coaching at Central Falls High to competing in the U.S. Senior Open? How does he spend 28 years in a classroom, 27 years as the C.F. wrestling coach, along with brief stints coaching football, baseball, basketball, soccer and softball for the Warriors, then get to compete with Hale Irwin, Palmer and even Dana Quigley, Constant's teammate at the University of Rhode Island 30 years ago?

In Constant's case, retirement is not really retirement.

"I had one career, now I'm having another career," is the way he describes it. It's not as if golf is new to Constant. He long was a regular in Rhode Island amateur events. He qualified for the State Amateur a number of times, although he had only minimal success on the championship level.

After retiring from teaching in June of 1967, Constant decided to really get serious about golf. So much so that he turned pro. He headed south last winter to work on his game in earnest. He played for two months on the Tommy Armour Tour—two events a week, some two-day tournaments, some one-day events.

The Armour circuit is one of a host of mini-tours. It offers competition in two divisions, the second being a Senior Division, for players 47 and older. Constant competed with a number of players. Walter Hall and David Oakley among them—who now play on the PGA Senior Tour, and Rex Caldwell, a longtime PGA Tour regular who is readying for the Senior Tour.

"I won one, had two seconds, two thirds and three fourths," Constant said. Since first prize is only $500 for a one-day event, which is the kind he won, and since players have to pay to play, Constant did not earn as much as he spent.

It cost me about $3,600, including food, hotels, everything," Constant said. He found the competition at times less than cordial. But he also saw his game improve enough to give him reason to believe he has a chance to play with anyone his age.

While I was there, I tried to qualify for two of the (Senior PGA) tour events," he added. "I should have made it in two of them. I played well for 14 or 15 holes. But then I couldn't finish. I wasn't mentally tough enough. That's the thing now, being able to just keep playing and not think about it."

"I'm playing against guys who have played for seven days a week for 35 years while I was in school," he said. "But they have two arms, two legs just like me. They have to put the ball in the hole just like I do. I know I don't have all the skills they have yet, but I think I can do it."

"I'm not going to try forever and go broke doing it. I don't have the money to do what some guys do," he said. "But I'm going to give myself a chance. It's like the third period of a wrestling match. I'm down one with one minute to go. You have to see what you have left in you. I found that the more I played with the better people, the more I wanted to play with them."

Next week he gets his chance to play with the very best. He already has plans for one practice round.

"One of Dana's (Quigley) friends called me when they saw I made it," Constant said. "They said they talked to Dana and he wants me to leave a note in his locker to tell him where I am so I can play with him one day."

Andrade, Mize the stars

Billy Andrade and Larry Mize were the stars of the 13th annual Insignia tournament last week at Warwick Country Club, although in different ways.

Bristol's Andrade, who is on a two-week break from the PGA Tour, won the event with a 63. Starting on the 11th hole, Andrade began birdie, eagle, birdie, birdie, birdie to go 6-under in his first five holes. He finished with a 63 despite two bogeys.

The event features a number of PGA and Senior PGA Tour players. Dana and Brett Quigley, Joey Sindelar, Oldy Browne, who came here the day after winning the Canon GHO, Mike Springer, Chris DiMarco and Chip Beck all took part. They helped raise more than $50,000 for the program to help the blind, bringing the 13-year total to more than $800,000.

Mize, though, was the star of the day. The previous day he had a four-stroke lead with four holes to go in Hartford before losing to Browne in a playoff. He not only fulfilled his appearance as planned, he won fans with his graciousness.

"So many people kept coming up to him and telling him they felt sorry for him," said Tom Gilbane, one of the organizers of the event. "He was just a tremendous gentleman, dealing with everyone."

"Some of the pros were doing a clinic after we played. He had an hour and 15 minutes to catch his plane and he came up and asked if he could help with the clinic," Gilbane said. "He was just so gracious. It was really something. We finally had to insist he leave to make sure he caught his plane."

Weiss is R.I. leader

Metacorn's David Weiss, thanks to winning or tying for first in each of the last three events, has taken the lead in the R.I. Chapter of the PGA Player of the Year contest.

Weiss won the pro-ams at both Segregansett and Highland, and tied Al Valante for first in the event at Fall River. Through seven events, Weiss has 42 points, to 30 for Vallante, from the Long Shot Driving Range. Andrew Young, an assistant at Pawtucket, is third with 20, followed by David Baluk of Gloucester.

Kyle Phelan of R.I.C.C. is 15, Frizzell of Wamunomett, 10; Mark O'Brien of North Kingstown, 9; Rob Baxter of Crestwood and Gary Dorsi of Green Valley, 8 each, and Willard Scholl of Newport, Alan Greim of the Atlantic Driving Range, Brian Fitzgibbons of Highland and John Rainone of Hawthorne, all with 7.

Nine more events, highlighted by the annual chapter championship, are on the schedule.

Strong R.I. contingent

Rhode Island will send a strong delegation to next week's New England Amateur, to be held Tuesday through Thursday at the New Haven, Conn., Country Club. Joey Iacofano, the 1997 R.I. Amateur champion, is entered, as are Paul Barber,

Kevin Clary and Herb Stevens of Potowomut, Charlie Blanchard and Bryce Waller of Wamunomett, Pat Lyons and Marc Brocato of Wamunomett, Andy Calzone of Metacorn, Nick Cioe of R.I.C.C., Brad Edgerton of Wamunomett, Peter Laurelli of Point Judith, Bill Pariseau of Lincoln and Mike Soudy of Valley. URI star Jim Salinetti of Lee, Mass., will defend his title.

Upcoming tourneys

Meals on Wheels will hold a charity classic Aug. 24 at Alpine. Proceeds benefit the program that distributes 2,500 meals daily and has distributed more than eight million meals overall to people in need. The day will include lunch, a 1 p.m. start and awards banquet. Play will be best-ball. Call 351-6700 for information.

• The Sexual Assault & Trauma Center of Rhode Island will hold its third annual tournament Monday at Warwick. The event, which will benefit the R.I. Children's Advocacy Center, will include lunch, a 1 o'clock shotgun start and prizes. Call 421-4100, ext. 12 or 16, for information.

• The Rhode Island America schoolship program will sponsor its first benefit tournament Oct. 1 at Richmond. The event, which will have a 1 o'clock shotgun start, will raise scholarship funds for the non-profit program. Several Rhode Island winners, including Heather Picard, the current Rhode Island, and Kelly Roark, last year's winner, will assist in helping run the event. Call 944-0303 or 232-1100 for information.

• St. Mary's Home for Children will hold its eighth annual tournament Aug. 24 at Metacorn. The event, for women, includes lunch, a 1 p.m. start and dinner. Fee is $145. # Capone's 142 wins medal honors in State Amateur

By BOB LEDDY
Journal Sports Writer

NARRAGANSETT—An all-day onshore wind caused more than a few minor headaches during yesterday's second qualifying round in the State Amateur golf tournament at Point Judith Country Club.

The least of those troubles was trying to keep the scoreboards from blowing over. For Quindesset's Mike Capone, the challenge of wind-blown putts may have been daunting, but his goal was clear.

"I just wanted to medal and qualify for (today)," said Capone, a senior at Wake Forest University and former Hendrick High All-Stater. "Today is the important part of the tourney."

Match play begins this morning among the top 32 scorers over 36 holes. Capone's 18-hole score yesterday of 37-47—74—and his two-day total of 142—was good for medalist honors. Capone shot a 3-under 68 Monday.

Capone won the 1996 State Amateur crown. Defending champion Joey Iacofano of Metacorn wound up with a 36-hole total of 147 after carding a 5-over 76.

"I played the course and my own game," said Capone, who parred nine of the 18 holes yesterday. "As far as the wind is concerned, you've got to deal with it. That's this course. You can't always have a perfect day."

Capone three-putted the par-4 eighth, and hit the left bunker on the par-3 ninth.

"I made six nice putts that didn't go in," Capone said. "The greens here are thick and grainy."

On the par-4, 440-yard 17th, Capone's tee shot landed in a water hazard. "The wind just kind of took it," he said. "It was tough out there. My main object was to qualify."

Capone birdied the sixth, seventh and 18th holes. He carded bogeys on six holes.

Mark Brocato of Wamunomett shot an even-par 71 yesterday for a 149 total. Brocato birdied the par-4, 324-yard 12th hole.

Iacofano, who bogeyed eight holes yesterday en route to his 76, said, "I didn't play the wind well. On the front nine I was just pushing, but on the back side the wind really picked up. Putting was tough. I hit the ball well, but I flew over a couple of greens because of the wind."

Also at 147 is Agawam Hunt's Walter Hunter. He was 1 over par yesterday with a pair of 36s.

Bill Campbell was right at home in the wind. "I play at Wamunomett, and it's not that different. Over there, you have the wind shots."

Campbell carded a pair of 35s yesterday for a 70 and a two-day score of 145. He birdied the third, fifth and 12th holes, and bogeyed the par-4, 425-yard eighth.

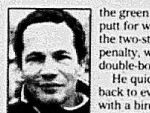

"I got up and down today," said Campbell, who on Monday fired a 4-over 75. "I was comfortable with the greens. They've made this a great course."

Paul Quigley of Rhode Island Country Club played well yesterday. Quigley, who won this tournament in 1988, 87 and '91, carded a 38 on the front nine, then shot a 37 on the back side for a 4-over 75. His two-day total is 155. Quigley shot an 80 on Monday.

Said Quigley, "I could not make a putt today. Over two days I made two birdies. But the greens were perfect—and the wind blew hard."

In a five-way playoff for the final three qualifying spots, Jim Stallman, George Philip and Chris Miranda earned the right to advance.

Donaldson

the green and two-putt for what, with the two-stroke penalty, was a double-bogey six. He quickly got back to even-par with a birdie on the 425-yard, par-4 eighth hole—the toughest on the front side—by hitting a 4-iron from 185 yards to 15 feet, then rolling in the put.

Hunter proceeded to rattle off five pars in a row and then birdie the par-4 14th before finishing his par-1 1-over after bogeying the par-4 15th and par-3 16th.

It was an impressive display of poise and talent for a player participating in his first State Amateur, a player who, when he became a member at Agawam Hunt in 1986, carried a 13-handicap.

"I think the West Point experience helps a lot dealing with pressure," Hunter said. "It's also important to keep my cool in my practice, because emotions can run pretty high."

Hunter was on an emotional high after winning medalist honors in qualifying for the Amateur last month at Wamunomett, shooting 74 in difficult conditions.

He has proved that was no fluke by following an opening round 75 Monday with a 1-over par 72 yesterday that left him tied for third with defending state champ Joey Iacofano of Metacorn, five shots behind medalist Mike Capone, a collegiate star at Wake Forest.

Had Hunter not been assessed that 2-shot penalty, he'd have tied runner-up Bill Campbell of Wamunomett for the low round on what was a very windy day.

"This was my first time out in a tournament like this," Hunter said, and it reminded me that when I went to jump school at Fort Benning the summer I was a junior.

We had three weeks of training before our first jump, and we'd practiced our landings so many times that it was pretty much mechanical before we got into the plane the first time.

"It was the second jump, after you've seen what it's really like, after you know what can go wrong, that worries you."

Hunter has done little wrong since deciding he was going to get serious about the game.

After moving to Hartford, he was able, despite his demanding law practice, to hit balls early in the morning before going to work, and to play a few holes at night before going home.

The better he got, the more he wanted to improve.

"I don't know anybody who doesn't want to hit more good shots," he said. "Whether you're a 40-handicapper or a scratch player, that's what everybody loves about the game."

He developed good length off the tee and, after switching to Mizuno blades at the suggestion of Agawam pro Norm Albergo, improved the accuracy of his irons.

Two years ago, his daughters gave him for Father's Day a copy of Bob Rotella's book, Golf Is Not A Game of Perfect, and Hunter says, he went from a 3-handicap to a scratch player in a month.

"Rotella says to take every shot as it comes. Don't think about the round you're having. Just focus on the target on each shot. All I could do, after I'd messed up, was to go to the right tee, pick another target, and let it rip."

Instead of falling apart, Hunter went on to tear up the course.

"After I tapped in for par on nine," he said, "I thought: Even if I bogey had the remaining holes, I've got it made. Then I caught myself. If you start thinking that way, I said to myself, 'you'll bogey, every hole. You've got to attack.'"

Instead of making excuses, Hunter made it to match play.

Salinetti ties for medal in Mass.

Journal News Reports

BELMONT, Mass.—Defending champion Jim Salinetti of Stockbridge Country Club, James Driscoll of the Charles River Country Club in Newton, Jon Fackell of New England Country Club in Bellingham and Brendan Hester of Sutton's Pleasant Valley—shared medalist honors yesterday at 3-over-par 145 after the first two days of play in the 90th Massachusetts Amateur Championship at Belmont Country Club.

Salinetti, of Lee, once again had an unspectacular front side, but came to life on the back nine and finished with a 1-over 72 for his share of medalist honors.

"It's getting a little frustrating to be starting so slow every round," said Salinetti, a University of Rhode Island junior who was 3-over at the turn.

"Just getting to the back play is a relief," he added. "There's a lot of pressure in these two days. If you have just one bad hole, it can take you out of match play."

Driscoll fired a 1-under-par 70 yesterday. The 1996 event champion managed the only under-par round of the 36-hole, medal-play portion of the tournament. Match-play begins with two rounds today.

"The fact that I was able to hit it straight today was important," said Driscoll, of Brookline. "I felt comfortable putting, but I had struggled on Monday, and it was good to keep the ball in play today."

Fackell—a Bellingham resident who lost the final in the Massachusetts Amateur in 1990—also had a 1-over 72 for his share of the medal.

"The key here is to keep the ball in the fairway off the tee, and then try to get the ball near or on the green," he said.

Hester, of Worcester, said patience was the key to his even-par 71 round and finish at 145 yesterday for a spot after the course leader board.

"This is a patience, hang-around kind of course," said Hester.

One shot back at 4-over 146 was Randy Mize of Wamunomett. Lee Club in Brockton, who finished with a 2-over 73.

Martinez comes up aces for Sox

He spins
a 4-hitter
to blank
Tribe, 1-0

By STEVEN KRASNER
Journal Sports Writer

BOSTON — The matchup promised pitching prowess.

Red Sox ace Pedro Martinez, a proven star, against the Cleveland Indians' Bartolo Colon, an emerging star. Two right-handers from the Dominican Republic going head-to-head.

They both were on the American League's All-Star team last week at Coors Field in Denver. Colon was the league leader in earned-run average at 2.56, and Martinez was second, at 2.00.

The promise of a duel was there, and they delivered.

Martinez and Colon were masterful, but Boston emerged victorious. Midge Cummings' home run deep into the right-field seats leading off the fifth inning provided the only offense, giving the slumping Red Sox a 1-0 victory over the Indians on a sultry night at Fenway Park.

Cummings was serving as Boston's designated hitter, taking over the platoon role for injured Reggie Jefferson (back), who was placed on the disabled list yesterday. Cummings batted ninth in the order, but his third homer of the year, and first since April 27, supplied Martinez with all the offense he would need. Martinez allowed only four hits

SIGNS OF THINGS TO COME: A prophetic new banner and a lot of zeroes on the scoreboard would be testament to Pedro Martinez's performance last night.

There's no need for you Sox fans to be on edge

JIM

BOSTON — Come in off the ledge. Close the window after you.

Come down off the bridge. No need to jump now.

Pour the hemlock down the drain. Break open some bubbly, instead, and drink a toast to Pedro Martinez, who last night was starter, stopper, and also closer for your suddenly slumping, struggling Red Sox.

Viva, Pedro! Who was nothing short of magnificent in a game that, if the Sox didn't absolutely, positively have to win, was one in which they certainly have to feel muuy, muy bien about coming out on top.

The defending American League champion Cleveland Indians were in a town for the first of a two-game mini-series that had taken on the proportions of a soap opera.

Has The World Turned on our Sox?

That's what Boston fans were wondering after the Red Sox lost five of six following the All-Star break.

No matter that the Sox went into last night tied with the Tribe for the second-best record in the American League.

Despite a 52-33 mark the first half of the season, skepticism and pessimism, rather than enthusiasm, were the dominant emotions among Sox supporters.

Instead of reveling in what has been a delightfully surprising season, Boston backers were trembling in fear that it was all a mirage. That, suddenly, it all would fall apart and the Sox would begin to free fall down the standings.

Those fears seemed about to come true when the Sox were swept in a four-game series in Baltimore, and then, after beating the lowly Devil Rays, let a 3-0 lead slip away Tuesday in a 5-4, 9th-inning defeat in which Tampa snapped an 11-game losing streak.

Had the Sox lost last night, with Pedro pitching, fans might have been tempted to start plummeting out of planes without a parachute.

Because, after tonight's game with the Indians, the Sox go on the road again for 18 of their next 22 games, including trips to Cleveland, Anaheim,

Revolution improve but are shut out, 1-0

■ Lassiter's goal gives D.C. United victory as New England loses 11th game in 12 starts.

By BUD BARKER
Journal Sports Writer

FOXBORO — D.C. United's Roy Lassiter kicked apart a fine performance by the Revolution last night, sending New England down to a tough 1-0 defeat at Foxboro Stadium.

Lassiter, a United prime time player, was bottled up by the Revolution defense most of the night. He missed a wide open header early in the second half but spoiled the Revolution's best effort in a while with a left-footed shot that found an open cage in the 81st minute.

Passes by Mike Silvinski and Jaime Moreno drew Rev goalkeeper Ian Feuer too far out of the cage to make the save.

The Revolution (5-13) couldn't keep a good man, or a good team, down all night, but the home team did its best in battling the Eastern Conference leaders to a standstill until Lassiter got the break he was looking for. It was fourth meeting between the teams this season, all being decided by a single goal and two by shootouts. United (16-5) won three of them.

"We played a splendid game for 80 minutes," said Revolution coach Thomas Rongen. "We have to take the positives, and I feel there were many."

THE JOB SUITS HIM JUST FINE: Peter Laviolette, 33, yesterday was introduced as the new head coach of the Providence Bruins.

P-Bruins' Laviolette has campaign promise

■ New players and returning players will have fun at work, he says, which, when coupled with a sense of discipline, will result in a winning season.

By BOB DICK
Journal Sports Writer

PROVIDENCE — Boston Bruins assistant general manager Mike O'Connell says he wants a return to the days when the Providence Bruins were an energetic and winning team that filled the seats at the Civic Center.

O'Connell, along with Providence team chairman Ed Anderson, believes that new head coach Peter Laviolette can recapture those glory days.

Laviolette, 33, got his first task out of the way yesterday when he, along with his wife Kristen and seven-month-old son Peter, were introduced to the media at the Civic Center.

Laviolette replaces Tom McVie, who was fired last week after his 1997-98 team won just 19 games and finished in last place in the Northern Division of the American Hockey League.

While some thought McVie, 63, was too old to relate to today's young players, some think Laviolette might be too young.

Last year, however, Laviolette surprised everyone when he guided the Wheeling (W. Va.) Nailers into the semifinals of the East Coast Hockey League playoffs in just his first year behind the bench.

RIGA Amateur becomes tournament of champions

■ Half of today's eight quarterfinalists have won the event before.

By PAUL KENYON
Journal Sports Writer

NARRAGANSETT — The R.I. Golf Association Amateur championship is rapidly turning into a tournament of champions.

There are champions everywhere in the 193rd Amateur, so much so that a previous winner will take part in every one of this morning's four quarterfinal matches at Point Judith Country Club.

The eight who survived the first two rounds yesterday include Joey Laciofano, the defending champion, and Mike Capone, the 1996 titlist. George Pirie, who has won twice (1989 and '94) also moved on, as did three-time champ Paul Quigley (1986, '87, '90).

As the brackets fall, the champions are in different quarters.

Capone, who, as tourney medalist, is at the top of the bracket, will meet the only remaining underdog, George Donnell, an East Providence resident who plays unattached. Pirie will go against Peter Laurelli, the beaten finalist last year. Quigley must take on veteran Greg Richard, a frequent contender. And Laciofano tackles Marc Brocato, one of the state's rising stars.

Obviously, with so many familiar names still alive upsets were few and far between on the first day of match play. Rarely has form held as strongly as it did in the first two rounds.

Not that the favorites had it easy. Laciofano, for one, learned it can be tough to be a target. It was his first experience as defending champion.

"Everybody wants to beat you. They feel they have nothing to lose and everything to gain," he said. "I'm thinking, 'Oh my God, am I supposed to win it again?'"

"I see the draw and I have to play (Jim) Stallman in the first round. He's a former finalist. I didn't

Even old dogs need a few new tricks at British Open

The Washington Post
SOUTHPORT, England — "The wind has been howling, the rain has been spitting out of menacing slate-grey skies and the layered bank has been de rigueur all week. And so, as the 127th British Open begins today at Royal Birkdale Golf Club in the Irish Sea, all the elements are in place for a run of golf the way it was meant to be played on an unforgiving course."

"The more you play the game, the more you realize that failure is more prevalent than success," said Tom Watson, who won the most recent of his five British Open titles here in 1983. "This is a game of adversity. You just have to deal with it."

The field of 156 players, most of whom will be wearing turtlenecks and stocking caps to keep warm, will need every shot in their bags. And there will be some shots many have never even thought of attempting if they stray from narrow fairways cut through the sand hills of this 7,018-yard, par-70 layout Watson considers among his favorites in links-style golf.

Because of an unusually wet winter in this corner of the world, the rough is straggling for this, the seventh British Open at Royal Birkdale.

Balls hit into the high hay will be suitably penalized — that is, if they can be located. "There will be a lot of golf balls out there for the members to find next week," Watson said.

Since the last time the British Open was played here, in 1991, Royal Birkdale's greens have been rebuilt. Soft and spongy seven years ago — "Pitching into them was like pitching into a laundry basket full of clothes," Jack Nicklaus moaned at the time — they have been replaced by firmer, faster and far more contoured surfaces.

Watson, 48 and 14 months removed from the PGA Senior Tour, wouldn't say so yesterday, but this may be his last best chance to equal old Harry Vardon's record of six British Open titles from 1896 to 1914. Watson credits his success on these shores to "my ability to get the ball up and down in bad conditions."

"People miss greens in bad conditions," Watson said. "Hell, that was my media operation — miss the green and get up and down for par. Like Seve (Ballesteros), a three-time British Open champion, you make par somehow. I've been known to make a Watson par here or there to break the backs of my competitors."

LOOKING GOOD: Barrington's Brad Faxon, left, and defending champ Justin Leonard practice yesterday for the British Open.

This week, as always, the competition is formidable, even if two-time champion Greg Norman is out for the first time since 1988 as he recovers from shoulder surgery, and England's Nick Faldo, a three-time winner, is nursing a sore right elbow that forced him to withdraw last week from a European tour event at Loch Lomond in Glasgow, Scotland. Nicklaus also is among the missing. He ended a streak of 36 consecutive appearances in British Opens (dating from 1962) and 146 straight appearances in the four major tournaments by withdrawing last week.

URI's Salinetti dethroned in Mass. Amateur

BELMONT, Mass. (AP) — Alistair Catto ended Jim Salinetti's reign as the Massachusetts Amateur champion with a 1-up win in the first round of match play yesterday at the Belmont Country Club.

Catto built an early lead as Salinetti, a junior at the University of Rhode Island and last year's tournament winner, struggled in the early part of the round.

"You've got to be a little lucky to do well in match play," said Catto. "I played decent, while Jim was not on his game. When you are playing the defending champion, you want to do your best."

Catto, of the Orchards Golf Club, had to hold off a late charge by Salinetti, of the Stockbridge Country Club, to win the match.

"I should have finished the match on 17, but I three-putted. I had to get up and down on 18 for a halve (tie) to win the match. You don't want to go extra holes with the defending champion."

Catto advanced to the quarterfinals, where he finished off Greg Wojtko, of the Georgetown Country Club, early by three holes with two to go in the second round.

Two of the four medalists — Jim Faskick of the New England Country Club, and James Driscoll of the Charles River Country Club in Newton — advanced to the quarterfinals.

Faskick defeated Paul Nunez Jr. of Ludlow, finishing the first round by three holes with two to go, then came back to beat Doug Clapp of Walpole, up four holes with three to go.

"I'm hitting the ball fairly consistently," said Faskick, who lost in the Mass. Am final in 1990. "This is a course where you have to keep the ball in play and take what you can get."

Driscoll, the 1996 champion, defeated Eric

McPhail, of Sandy Burr in Wayland, by two holes in the first round. He then eliminated Paul Murphy, of Charles River, when he went up four holes with three to go.

Driscoll was three down after five holes in his match with McPhail, pulled even after 16 holes and birdied 17 and 18 to win.

In the afternoon, Driscoll got out to an early lead and coasted to the win.

"Neither of us played that well in the afternoon," he said. "Once I got the big lead I wasn't grinding as much as I should. You need a match like this where you can win without grinding, then you are ready when you have to grind."

Also reaching the quarterfinals were Scott Johnson of Longmeadow Country Club, Joe Keller of Oyster Harbors, Kevin Quinn of Charles River, Frank Vana, Jr. of Marlboro Country Club and Mike Calk of Brockton Country Club.

have it easy," Laciofano said. Perhaps because of the pressure, Laciofano did not play his best. Yet, he fought his way past Stallman, 2 and 1, then held off a determined comeback by Chris Terrieri in the second round. Terrieri, the HNL golfer from Warwick who is currently a Chicago Black Hawks free agent, was 4 down with five to play. He won 14 and 15 with birdies and 16 with a par to get within one.

Terrieri got a terrible break when his drive on 17 hit into the top left corner of a fairway bunker and kicked dead right into a lie half in the bunker and half in a grass island. That led to a bogey. Laciofano pulled his approach on the par-4 into the left front bunker, then hit the hole on the first bounce with his explosion. He made a three-putter for par a 2 and 1 victory.

"I had three three-putts today. I snapped out one into the trees. I didn't play that well, but I was able to win," is the way Laciofano summed up his day's work.

His quarterfinal opponent, Brocato, had a full finish in eliminating John Mello of Montauk, 4 and 3, in the second round.

Brocato, 28, has been playing golf for about eight years, in state events for only five. Yet, three years in a row he has played well enough to earn an exemption into the Amateur. A big strong player from Winaupac, Brocato was even with Mello through nine. He won 10, 11, 13 and 14 to take the match. Capone also was pushed hard, especially in the second round when he got past Sakonnet veteran, John Davis, 2 up.

Davis was 1 up after eight. Capone pulled off the key come back on the par-3 ninth.

"He got up, after winning eight, and hit a four," Capone said. "I told myself I could be 2 down or 1 in the 10th, and I hit a good shot. I hit it 12 feet below the hole. I made my birdie, then he made his on top of me."

The long-hitting Capone, a senior at Wake Forest, used his length to win 10, 11, and 13, all holes where distance is a factor. Davis, though, took 15 to get back within one. Capone could not close out the match until he won the par-5 18th for the 2-up decision.

Capone must face Donnell, who squeezed past Steve Travis, 1 up, then got an early jump and maintained control for a 4-and-3 second-round triumph over Public Links champion Mike McCormick. Donnell and Capone also met last year and won 20 holes in the first round before Capone won.

The two players who have been the most dominant over the past 15 years, Pirie and Quigley, turned in their best golf of the week.

Pirie, playing in perhaps the strongest section of the draw, downed two Wannamoisset stars, Tom Goryl and Bill Lunn, 3 and 2 and 2 and 1, respectively. The match with Lunn was a shootout. Pirie birdied the first hole. Lunn birdied the next two. Pirie birdied five to pull even.

Lunnie left the door open with a couple putting problems, and Pirie took advantage to go 2 up after 16. Lunnie made a 20-footer for bird on 17 to stay alive, but Pirie matched it by rolling in one final bird of his own.

"Billy's one of the toughest guys I've played," Pirie said. "It really was a shootout. . . . It was probably one of the best matches I've ever been involved in."

Laurelli earned the spot opposite Pirie with a 1-up victory over Point Judith clubmate Fred Schick. The two were even going down the par-3 18th.

Laurelli won it with a bird after hitting his drive into the trees on the right. He hit a four-wood over the trees and back into the fairway, then a sand wedge to 12 feet. Schick hit three good shots and had an eight-footer for bird. Laurelli made his bird while Schick narrowly missed his.

Quigley, who had only two birds in two days of qualifying, was sharp in both his victories, 3 and 2 over Rob Grossguth, then by the same score over Bill Campbell.

Campbell pushed Quigley as he birdied three of the first four holes. However, Quigley had two birdies of his own on the front side, then won 13, 14 and 16 for a 3-and-2 decision.

He later said he was grateful to the jury and when asked about the emotional toll of the trial

Sox strike up a hit parade vs. Indians

VIGILANCE REWARDED: John Valentin of the Red Sox dives back to second base safely on pickoff attempt as Indians' Omar Vizquel takes throw from pitcher Dwight Gooden in fourth inning.

Lewis contributes many little things to the success of this year's Sox

BILL PARRILLO

BOSTON — He left the home runs to the big guys. Troy O'Leary slugged a grand slam over the screen in left, and Nomar Garciaparra lofted a three-run shot into the bleachers in center. Others chipped in with doubles and singles.

Meanwhile, Darren Lewis took care of the little things.

He had two bunt singles and two stolen bases. He scored three runs. He even walked with the bases loaded.

driving in a run.

"Anything to put pressure on the other team," Lewis said shortly after the Boston Red Sox had finished demolishing the Cleveland Indians, 15-5, at Fenway Park last night. "If I can get on base, if I can make things happen, that puts everybody in a positive frame of mind."

Garciaparra, O'Leary combine for 10 RBI in a 15-5 outburst

By SEAN McADAM
Journal Sports Writer

BOSTON — There's no accounting for the ups and downs of the Red Sox' offense of late. From one game to the next, it's impossible to tell whether the team is going to explode at the plate or fizzle out altogether.

One night after the team had provided Pedro Martinez with a single run, the Sox erupted for 17 hits in a 15-5 rout of the Cleveland Indians.

The 15 runs were nearly equal the amount of runs (17) the Sox had scored in their previous seven games since the second half of the season began. On the other hand, it marked the fourth time in the last six home games that the Sox had plated 15 runs in games at Fenway.

"It's just the nature of the game sometimes," shrugged manager Jimmy Williams, unable to explain his team's outburst. "Good pitching shuts down good hitting. Then there are times when good hitting gets contagious. It just happens. I don't have any solid answers."

The Red Sox' attack was well balanced last night, with six players contributing multiple-hit games. In the eighth inning alone, when the Red Sox sent 12 hitters to the plate and scored seven runs, every hitter except Mo Vaughn contributed a hit.

Nomar Garciaparra and Troy O'Leary combined for six hits, and each knocked in five runs. For Garciaparra, the five RBI matched a career-high, set twice earlier this season.

"I don't know what it was," said Garciaparra, "but we just kind of got into a good rhythm out there."

The victory gave the Sox a sweep of the two-game series with the Indians. The Sox are now 7-1 in eight games against the Indians this season. The two teams play next week at Jacobs Field, the last scheduled meeting between them this season.

The key blow for the Red Sox was a grand slam by O'Leary, who launched an outside pitch from Dwight Gooden into the screen. O'Leary tied his career-

Amateur showdown a dream duel

■ Defending champion Joey Laciofano faces Mike Capone, the '96 winner and this year's medalist, in a 36-hole final today.

By PAUL KENYON
Journal Sports Writer

NARRAGANSETT — It's the dream match to determine the best amateur golfer in Rhode Island.

Put Joey Laciofano, the 1997 state champion, on one side. Get Mike Capone, the 1996 champ and the medalist in this year's tournament, on the other. Then let them launch 300-yard drives at each other.

While Laciofano and Capone have become good friends over the last few years, they have never met in match play. Until today, that is.

The state's two best will go head-to-head in the 36-hole final of the 93rd R.I. Golf Association Amateur Championship at Point Judith Country

SOUTHPORT, England — Unless yesterday was a mirage, a fluke or a one-day wonder, we may have seen the first stirrings of a more mature, more conservative, more cautious Tiger Woods.

On a day when the hottest golfer in the world might have lived up to his image by trying to overpower the gnarly Royal Birkdale Golf Club, he didn't. He throttled back and played smart. And it paid off on the first day of history's most prestigious golf tournament.

Instead of shooting himself out of the 127th British Open, as Woods has done early in majors since winning the Masters last year, he fashioned a

Sox hit road with a thud at Detroit

Tigers win 6-4 on 3-run homer by Gabe Alvarez

By STEVEN KRASNER
Journal Sports Writer

DETROIT — The treacherous part of the season has arrived for the Boston Red Sox.

And it didn't get off to a particularly bright start.

The Red Sox began a stretch in which they play 18 of 22 games away from Fenway Park, and they opened it by dropping a 6-4 decision last night to the Detroit Tigers at Tiger Stadium.

Jim Ho Cho, making his third start since being recalled from Trenton, was knocked out in the sixth on Gabe Alvarez's tie-breaking three-run homer. Alvarez came into the game with one hit in 21 at-bats since the All Star Game.

Cho hung a 1-and-2 breaking ball to Alvarez, as the Tigers took a 5-2 lead.

Back-to-back homers by Troy O'Leary and Mike Benjamin off Brian Powell, who won his first major league game in his fourth start, narrowed the Sox' deficit to 5-4 in the seventh.

But Darren Braggs' bases-loaded grounder later in the inning was turned into a dazzling inning-ending double play by second baseman Damion Easley, and the Tigers' relief corps blanketed Boston the rest of the way.

So Cho dropped to 0-3 as his earned-run average rose to 7.47, and there's some question as to whether he'll still be with the team by the time his turn in the rotation comes around again on Thursday.

"His pitching was improved, especially his side ball and fastball, but at the decisive moment, he made a mistake," was how an interpreter assessed the right-hander's performance after Cho tackled the question.

"One bad (pitch) beat him," said manager Jimmy Williams with a shrug.

Not that Williams could say with a straight face that Cho's performance was spotless with the exception of the gopher ball to Alvarez, the Tigers' rookie third baseman.

Cho, who fanned five and did not walk a batter, was hit hard often, lucky that many of the Tigers' missiles were hit directly at Boston fielders.

"He mislocated," was how pitching coach Joe Kerrigan described Cho's outing. "He was missing his target at times by a lot."

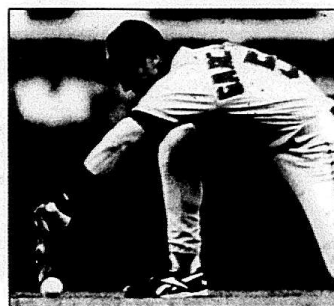

"And he threw too many strikes for his own good," said Kerrigan. "He probably wanted to bounce that curveball (to Alvarez) but he threw it right down the middle. That's inexperience. Young pitchers have to throw strikes, but they also have to learn how to pitch off the plate when they're ahead in the count."

"He wasn't as consistent with his control," said catcher Scott Hatteberg. "When he couldn't put the ball where he wanted it, they crunched it. But there were flashes of brilliance, especially the way he handled Easley."

Cho whiffed Easley, an All-Star this season, three times.

But Cho wasn't able to hold a lead.

Watts unlikely leader at British Open

■ Wind and rain play havoc with all the players except Watts, who fires his second consecutive below-70 round.

By LEONARD SHAPIRO
The Washington Post

SOUTHPORT, England — Tiger Woods and most of the world's finest players were often left twisting in the wind yesterday at the 127th British Open, as early-morning rain and late-afternoon gusts of 35 mph transformed Royal Birkdale Golf Club from docile to demonic.

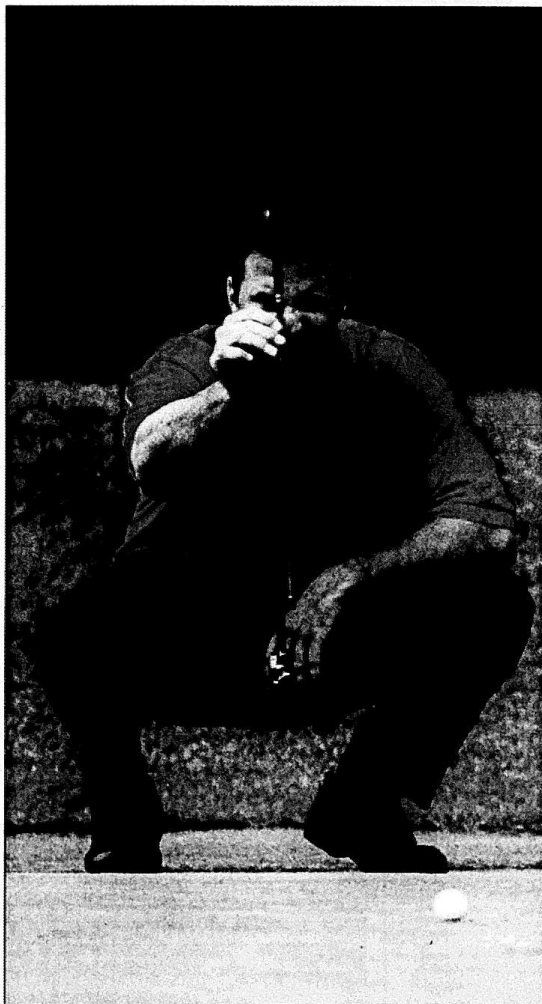

By day's end, many of the first-round leaders had fallen down, or totally off, the mercurial leader board, replaced at the top by American journeyman Brian Watts. A regular on the Japanese tour who has missed the cut in three of his previous five British Opens, the 32-year-old from Edmond, Okla., shot 69 yesterday for a total of 3-under-par 137.

That gave him a one-stroke lead over Woods, who salvaged his round with birdies on his last two holes for a 73. Zimbabwe's Nick Price, who made a 10-foot eagle putt at the 17th for a 72, and fearless Justin Rose, a 17-year-old English amateur, Rose, who had to qualify for the tournament over 36 holes Sunday and Monday, posted a stunning 66, equaling the lowest round by an amateur in this event with the best performance of the day and his life.

Woods, the first-round co-leader along with fellow American John Huston, began yesterday with two bogeys and three in his first six holes. He was 4-over after 10 holes, when play was suspended for 30 minutes because of storm clouds and chilly winds that moved several golf balls while players were preparing to putt.

Woods righted himself on the back nine, making his only birdies on the last two holes. He was delighted to be just a shot off the lead.

Edge on greens earns Iacofano 2nd Amateur title

■ Challenger and defending champion match 300-yard drives but chipping and putting make the difference in RIGA tourney.

By PAUL KENYON
Journal Sports Writer

NARRAGANSETT — In the end, it came down to chipping and putting.

Joey Iacofano and Michael Capone put on a show yesterday with their ability to drive the ball in their 36-hole match for the R.I. Golf Association Amateur title at Point Judith Country Club. That duel was a draw as the two rocked one 300-yard smash after another.

Around the greens, though, Iacofano was the one who clearly had the upper hand, enough to earn a 2-and-1 triumph and his second straight title.

Iacofano took the lead late in the morning round, built it to 5-up with 11 to play, then hung on as both players struggled down the stretch.

The victory vaulted the 29-year-old from Metacomet into elite company in state golfing history. He is the 10th man in the event's 93 years to earn back-to-back titles.

Others are: Dan Fairchild (1918-19), Tommy Taylor (1930-31), John P. Burke (1934-35-36), Stan Kozlowski (1949-50 and again in '58-59-60), Bob Kosten (1952-53), Ronnie Quinn (1966-67), Brad Faxon (1981-82) and Paul Quigley (1986-87).

The second championship meant even more to him than the first, which he won at Quinnesett last July.

"There have been a lot of people who have doubted me. Even last year when I won, people kind of doubted me," Iacofano said. "They said well it's match play. Or, Mike (Capone, the 1996 champion) didn't go to the final."

"Well, I played him this year and I did win. Whatever monkey was on my back is gone," he said.

Iacofano broke down in tears after sinking a six-foot, par-saving putt on the 35th hole to win. He embraced his mother, Betty, who followed him around all week and quickly called his father on a cellular phone. His father, Joe Iacofano, won the RIGA Senior Four-Ball earlier this year with Brad Faxon Sr. He

Pats, top pick, agree to 5-year pact

By ED DUCKWORTH
Journal Sports Writer

SMITHFIELD — Robert Edwards, who is being counted on to replace All-Pro Curtis Martin as the team's starting tailback this fall, came to terms with the New England Patriots yesterday.

The 5-foot-11, 218-pound former Georgia standout agreed to an incentive-laden five-year contract that is worth at least $5.7 million, his agent Allen Wade reported.

"Robert was looking for a four-year deal but the Patriots were insisting he sign for six," Wade said by telephone from his law office in Memphis, Tenn. "In the end, we each gave a little to reach this agreement."

Wade said Edwards would receive a $3.1-million signing bonus and be paid about $500,000 a year over the life of the contract.

EDWARDS

"We built an escalation clause or two in the deal that could benefit Robert in the fourth and fifth years if he becomes the kind of big-time performer we expect him to be," added Wade. "I think the agreement we reached is fair to both sides."

Edwards, the 18th player selected in last spring's college draft, is expected to report for a physical at the Patriots' training camp at Bryant College tomorrow.

Then on Monday, he will begin learning the ins and outs of the attack the Patriots will employ under the direction of Ernie Zampese, their new offensive coordinator.

"Robert felt it was important that he be there from the start, so the deadline probably played a role in the spirit of compromise both sides showed," said Wade. "I think the Patriots should be very happy to have him signed."

Although he was sidelined by a sprained ankle early last season, Edwards gained 830 yards on 142 carries in his senior year at Georgia, where he was favorably compared to alumni Garrison Hearst and Terrell Davis.

But it wasn't until Edwards had impressed everyone in the Senior Bowl and his post-season workouts that his stock soared.

Now the one-time cornerback is regarded as the "best hands" back in the draft and his college coach, Jim Donnan, claims that Edwards is

Seekonk says good-bye to an old friend tonight

■ Pro Stock feature race to honor Ronald "Tiny" Levesque who died of cancer last week.

By MARK SCHMIDDEL
Journal Sports Writer

There'll be racing at Seekonk Speedway tonight, but some of the fun has been taken out of it.

The men and women who work in the track's pit lost one of their own a week ago today with the death of Ronald "Tiny" Levesque, who directed many race teams to Seekonk Speedway championships. Tonight's Pro Stock feature race has been named in his honor.

Oddly, for a man who was thought to be a genius at suspension setup, especially at Seekonk, Levesque never drove race cars.

"He was always too big to drive, even as a kid," said driver Vinny Annarummo, who won three Pro Stock championships with Levesque on his team. "I think he started working on race cars when he was 15, and he was always in poor health in his later years."

Levesque, a Central Falls native who lived in Lakeville, Mass., was diagnosed with cancer last fall. Heart troubles and diabetes preceded that. He was 59. He is survived by his wife, son, daughter and a family of racers who will miss intelligence and honesty.

"He never complained," Annarummo said. "And even when he his best position at the halfway point of a major tournament since he won the 1997 Masters by 12 shots.

"It was one of those days where you have to stay patient because you know no one else is really going low," Woods said. "Shooting 65 (Thursday) was a blessing, and I came out smelling like a rose (by birdieing those last two holes)."

Huston took him out of the picture with a 77-142 in a round that included six bogeys and a double bogey at the 489-yard sixth hole, a monster that played dead into the wind and normally is a slightly longer par-5 for the members. Denmark's Thomas Bjorn, with a birdie at No. 17, was the only other player under par after 36 holes with a 71-139.

A half-dozen players were at even-par 140, including 97 runner-up Jesper Parnevik of Sweden (72 yesterday) and four of Woods' Rye Cup teammates — his good friend Mark O'Meara (68), Jim Furyk (70), Davis Love III (73) and Fred Couples (74).

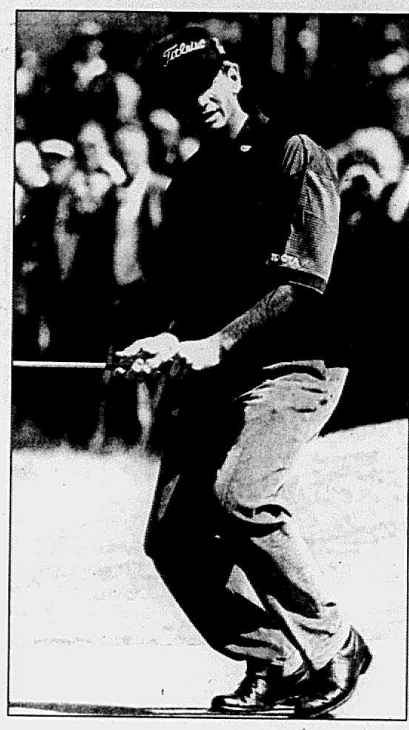

The leader, Watts, never has finished better than 40th in this event and had no expectation of doing much better after playing poorly in the practice rounds. However, he is the only player in the field with two rounds in the 60s.

Yesterday, in addition to the rain and wind, he survived two bogeys and a double bogey in his first six holes, although he did make birdies at the second and third.

He had two more birdies on the back nine, the last at the 17th, where he reached the green in two shots and 2-putted from 30 feet.

Woods, carefree and joking with reporters while shooting Sunday par Thursday, was less jovial yesterday, especially after his dreadful start.

He hit his second shot at the first hole into a bunker, blasted the ball 20 feet past the hole and missed the par putt.

OUCH! Barrington's Brad Faxon misses a birdie putt on the third hole yesterday at Royal Birkdale Golf Course in northwest England.
